Dear Professor Trainor,

We are writing further to our letter to you of 17 November, which was sent on behalf of the King's College London People & Planet Society members and supported by Matt Pusey and Lee Peterson of KCLSU.

The People & Planet Society launched a Go Green campaign during the week of 14-18 November last semester. Society members ran stalls on the Guy's, Strand and Waterloo campuses during lunchtimes, at which students were able to find out more about the campaign and pick up leaflets about a range of environmentally friendly approaches which they could adopt themselves, at home. During that week, we also launched a petition to enable students to show their support for the Go Green campaign which outlines the key steps which the College needs to take to improve its environmental performance (set out in the Go Green report sent to you on 17 November).

The attached petition calls on the College to:

1. Employ full-time staff dedicated to environmental management.
2. Conduct a comprehensive review of all the University's environmental impacts.
3. Produce and implement a publicly available environmental policy.
4. Show full commitment from senior university management for a programme of environmental improvement.

It is clear from the number of names collected during lunchtime sessions that many students across a number of Schools and Departments feel strongly about environmental concerns and would like to see the College act on the four steps outlined above.

Many of those who supported the petition expressed a wish to see the College implement schemes in which students themselves can take an active role in improving the College's 'green' status – for example, a recycling scheme providing comprehensive recycling facilities on the campuses (including the cafeterias) and in halls of residence.

We look forward to your response to our campaign and the requests of KCL students.

Yours sincerely,

Carolyn Dawson
